He looks like a yankzee... (Although only the landlord said that, he didn't deny it. He might have been one before.)
He's in his first year of college, majoring in Japanese Literature. He also passed level two kanji examinations.
A chain smoker, but the type of Mr. Nice Guy who would go outside to smoke instead.

His room is only separated from Rio by a sliding paper door. Moreover, it's the only entrance and exit Rio has to use. Basically, he has no privacy at all...

Before he came here, he stayed at various friends' homes, leading a lonely life.

Soon he thought it was time to settle down and joined this room-sharing apartment. He intends to change his lifestyle bit by bit.

401 landlord. He's studying in a famous direct-entry middle to high school. A middle third-year high school student. He's not cute at all. He always said studying is a kid's work. He loves playing games and always challenges Rio.

He feels Keigo is too noisy (Keigo has a loud voice), because their rooms are next to each other. Luckily, 401 is the corner house so the noise doesn't affect 402 very much.

YAGI AKIRA

A good friend of Kyouichirou's (and/or) father and his guardian. He suggested the room sharing and selected the occupants. As a famous reporter, he needs to travel overseas frequently. In the end, he has never seen the occupants.

He seems frivolous and the way he chose the occupants was actually through their photos (faces).
